This program is intended for the training of dentists in the management of pain and anxiety of patients during dental treatment. It involves a series of modules, each requiring prerequisite study and the successful completion of written examinations following lectures. A module on Advanced Cardiac Life Support (ACLS) geared towards dentists is integrated into the program and meets all mandatory requirements. Successful completion of the first three modules including ACLS is required to participate in the 4th and 5th module of training. As a recognized certification program, each participant is required to complete a minimum of 20 patient experiences during the clinical module of this program.
